Doylestown Dentist Dr. Laurence Stone Earns Lifelong Learning & Service Recognition from the Academy of General Dentistry

Laurence H. Stone, D.D.S., with a General and Cosmetic Dentistry practice in Doylestown, was presented with the Academy of General Dentistry's (AGD) 2010 Lifelong Learning & Service Recognition (LLSR) July 10, 2010 during the evening Convocation Ceremony at the AGD's Annual Meeting and Exhibits in New Orleans, LA.

The LLSR is presented only to AGD members who have gone above and beyond earning the association's highest honor of Mastership. To accomplish this recognition, Dr. Stone completed at least 1,600 hours of continuing dental education in 16 different dental disciplines. In addition, he needed to complete at least 100 hours of dental-related community/volunteer service. Since its inception in 2005, only 127 of the AGD's 35,000-plus members have received the prestigious LLSR recognition.

"Recipients of the LLSR are true leaders among our organization and wholly embrace the AGD's core principles and ideals," says AGD President David F. Halpern, DMD, FAGD. "For Dr. Stone this award symbolizes a career of excellence in dentistry and demonstrates the characteristics of a role model to his fellow dentists and to members of the community."
